GREYLOCK ENERGY REMAINS OPERATIONAL DURING CORONAVIRUS SHUTDOWN

Charleston, W.Va. – Officials with Greylock Energy today announced that in response to the current Coronavirus outbreak, the company’s corporate headquarters would remain closed for the foreseeable future. However, employees will continue working remotely and the company remains operating as usual.

According to Kyle Mork, Greylock’s president and CEO, “Our team members are our greatest asset and we are committed to helping keep our employees and their families safe and healthy – that is why we made the decision to close our headquarters. But, we are fortunate that through the wonders of technology, the transition to working remotely has been seamless and all areas of our business remain fully operational.”

Greylock initially closed its office, temporarily, the week of March 16. Based on the ongoing situation, the company elected to extend the closure indefinitely.
